Insider the new Kenwood High School

The massive size of the new high school is apparent in this view. In the forefront is the building which houses the auditorium. In the middle is the academic building, which holds all the classrooms and in there is the gymnasium. Photo by Izzy.

Biology teachers, Marilyn Klawina and Loran Fitz, look at an Environmental Control Chamber, a new piece of equipment in the Biology Laboratory at Kenwood High School. Photo by Nancy Hays.

One of the spacious classrooms in the academic building at Kenwood High School, as workmen finish the wiring and other minor touches. Photo by Nancy Hays.

The scaffolding and other construction equipment still remain in the auditorium as workmen rush to try and finish it as soon as possible. When finished the auditorium will hold approximately 750 people. Photo by Nancy Hays.

A workman puts the finishing touches on the equipment in a new reading laboratory. Photo by Nancy Hays.